INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON SUSTAINABILITY SCIENCE

SAPIENZA UNIVERSITY OF ROME
JUNE 23rd-25th 2010

"Don't wait, it's time to act" is the advice that the Nobel Prize Winner Elinor Ostrom gave to the participants of the International Conference on Sustainability Science. Every single person and his preferences can make the difference. "Shopping with the future in mind, paying attention to savings, and perceiving the value of the commons, can help us to build a future sustainable development" said the Professor of Economic Sciences of the Indiana University, and Founding Director Centre for the study of Institutional Diversity, Arizona State University, at the opening remarks of ICSS2010.

"It is necessary a dialogue between policy makers and the new Sustainability Science's scientific community and don't be afraid of failure" is the direct invitation coming from the Economic Nobel Prize Winner, who reminded that real success is the result of correcting the past mistakes.

"The Minister of the Environment intends to interact with the scientific community of the new Sustainability Science, for the necessary methodology implementation to finalize the various interdisciplinary actions internationally moved" is the incipit by Corrado Clini, Director General of the Italian Ministry for the Environment, Land and Sea. Underlining the compulsory commitment between institutions and the academic arena, the Chairman of the inter-ministerial task force for the implementation of Kyoto Protocol announced a strategic collaboration with the actual ICSS2010 working panel at Sapienza University of Rome.
